Honoring Ohio's Indigenous past: The Shawnee story

February 1, 2024
Randy Edwards/courtesy of Ohio Cooperative Living https://ohiocoopliving.com/

The last organized departure of Shawnee people from Ohio began in September 1832. Pushed from their homes by the 1830 Indian Removal Act — about two decades after the death of their celebrated leader, Tecumseh — the last band of the once-powerful nation began a difficult journey to Indian Country, now known as Oklahoma.

It's been nearly two centuries since that sorrowful exodus from Lewistown, but the Shawnee have not forgotten their roots, says Glenna Wallace, chief of the Eastern Shawnee Tribe, based near Wyandotte, Oklahoma.

"Ohio will always be our homeland," Wallace says. "That's where our ancestors were, where our ancestors died."

Telling the story of the Shawnee — and their relationship with Ohio settlers — is the motivation behind the creation of Great Council State Park, scheduled to open early this year on State Route 68 between Xenia and Yellow Springs.

THE CHIEF'S REPORT

GLENNA J. WALLACE

Hatito Fellow Tribal Citizens,

I think of the song lyrics "What a difference a day makes," but in this case it's the difference between the time I wrote the last Shooting Star letter in January and today's date in February. In January we had seriously below zero temperatures several times, but one mild day we had one of the most beautiful early morning snow storms I have witnessed in many moons. It was a scenic snowfall of the purest white and huge snowflakes quickly almost majestically turning the dingy winter ground and grasses into a four-inch soft and fluffy gentle white blanket bringing back long forgotten memories of my Grandmother Enyart's inviting featherbed smothered with warm, cozy comforters. The scene was nothing short of picturesque and I didn't dare go outside, fearful of even walking in the snow lest I spoil this masterpiece Mother Nature made for me. I sat in the kitchen looking out the wall of windows where I could see my eight birdfeeders filled with red cardinals, grey doves, screechy blue jays, black and white woodpeckers with their tufty red heads feeding upon the buffet of sunflower seeds, peanuts, and suet cakes. Ahhh, life was good.

Contrast that January with the week we are now having in February where the temperatures have often been in the sixties, even reaching seventy. Flower beds sport the green leaves of hyacinths, tulips, crocus, even the tall green blades of naked ladies. Yes, I am talking about plants, flowers. And this morning as I pulled out of my driveway the long row of golden daffodils against the rock walls seemingly stood at attention, straight, erect with golden faces looking upward enjoying the sun. Ahhh, life is good. I love it, but I fear it is too early, I fear cold temps will reappear and early blooms, early growth will suffer. But I will bask in it while I can.

Progress continues on projects here and it seems almost anywhere we look we see piles of dirt, rock, signs of excavation. The large Governmental building has a full basement, so we are talking about huge, expansive diggings in the ground. And of course, building a road means working with dirt the entire time. Both projects are moving forward. And it seems time just flies.

Speaking of time, I want to remind everyone that we have several benefit programs funded through the American Rescue Plan Act known as ARPA and those programs end the close of this calendar year, meaning December 31, 2024. These are federally funded programs and won't be available come next January. This includes Assistance, Mortgage Assistance, Assistance, additional Utility Assistance. These are COVID related programs, meaning that the reason the individual is behind in rent or mortgage payments, etc. is due to COVID factors such as loss of employment due to job layoffs or health impairments due to COVID, or need for children or even college age students to do virtual schoolwork because of schools being affected by COVID factors. These benefits are called Specialized Programs and Mercedes Lewis is the Program Assistant. If you have questions, reach out to her for program clarifications or applications at mlewis@estoo.net or call 918 238 5151, ext. 1308 or Amber Mittag, the program Director at amittag@estoo.net or ext. 1306. These programs are for your benefit, so find out if you qualify and use them while you can.

Speaking of benefits, I want to personally thank you for your patience while our Social Services Department has been shut down as we converted to our new program. Notification that your reimbursement claim has been received is now up and running again and hopefully we can get back on schedule. Please remember that using the old P.O. Box 350, Seneca, MO mailing address will only delay receiving your reimbursement. If you have questions, give us a call.

This week I met with the design/exhibit team members working on the new Interpretive Center located near Oldtown/Xenia, Ohio honoring Tecumseh and the three federally recognized Shawnee tribes. As I stated last month, they have encountered numerous construction delays. Tentative date for Grand Opening is now projected to be June 7. Remember, I said "tentative" and "projected". It's impossible to make travel plans until we know something definite, so I will keep you posted.

Congratulations to Wanda Stovall and Ceremonial Chief Shawn King for hosting an event this month honoring our youth. Special guest and tribal citizen J.R. Conrad, former pro football player and current motivational youth activist, brought several of his pro team players along with outstanding college sports players to encourage our youngsters to be the best they can be and to make wise decisions in life. Each athlete spoke, encouraging our youth to avoid drugs, alcohol, to set goals and live a productive life. Each guest was honored by being blanketed along with BC members, the Chief, Ceremonial Chief and Wanda. A traditional meal was served, and all enjoyed an inspiring evening. We need more events like this.

Again, I want to remind you that our annual Elders Dinner will be held the last Friday in April, specifically April 26 at our AOA. For those coming from out of town, you will be able to see the progress on our Governmental Building and 110 Road. Mark those calendars and plan to attend. Several drive considerable distance to attend this banquet and stay overnight at Indigo Sky at discounted prices. This event has become like a family reunion, an Eastern Shawnee Family Reunion, so I look forward to seeing many of you. We'll have good food, beautiful decorations, gifts, feature a family genealogy, visit with friends/family, and make new friends. That's April 26. And of course, elders can bring their spouses or a guest. Schools will soon be ending for summer break. That means those students 16-24 may be looking for summer jobs. Consider joining our Summer Youth Program. Students may begin immediately after school closure and work until the new school year begins. Or we are flexible and if a week or two between school closure and job commencement is needed or desired, we will work with you. We have staffing opportunities in our Early Childhood Learning Center, our Wellness Center, Maintenance, Print Shop, Growing Thyme, AOA, EPA to name a few. Starting wage is $13 an hour and if you worked the entire summer would be earning more than $6,000. Plus we will work with you so you can participate in any camps or trips you may have planned. For information, contact HR Director Kendra Stuart kstuart@estoo.net or call her at 918 238 5151, ext.1021.

Updates on some of our Eastern Shawnee family and employees include condolences to Kathie Kent's family. Kathie, as you know, is the Secretary of the Business Committee and her brother Randy suffered the loss of his wife just recently. Please keep this family in your thoughts. Also remember the Bud Nelson family. Bud has been in the hospital in Joplin so keep him and his caretakers in your thoughts. And we send well wishes to employee Sharon Farris, our long time Benefits Director. Sharon is retiring after 16 years with us, saying it is time to travel and spend more time with her family. We will certainly miss her, and she deserves the best. Just come back and see us occasionally Sharon.

As always, it has been my honor to serve as your Chief. If I can ever be of assistance, please do not hesitate to contact me. I may be reached by mail at 12755 S. 705 Road, Wyandotte, OK 74370, email at gjwallace@estoo.net however, I do not do Facebook nor Linkedin.I may also be reached at the following telephone numbers: Office 918 238 5151 ext. 1820; cell, 918 533 8422 or by text. My personal mailing address is 18675 Hwy 43, Seneca, MO, 64865.Stay safe. Stay healthy. Stay optimistic. Walk in balance. Remember, walk in balance! Chief Glenna

Wallace, who has tangled with state officials on other issues, praises ODNR and the Ohio History Connection for the efforts to accurately present the Shawnee story in the new park. "I've always told them, 'Don't talk about us, talk with us,' and that has happened from day one with this project," she says.

Ohio Gov. Mike DeWine, who hails from that part of Ohio, chose the name to reflect a collaborative way of presenting history. "Growing up near Oldtown, I have always been captivated by the area's Shawnee and pioneer past," he said. "Great Council State Park will ensure this fascinating history will continue to be passed down to future generations." Talon Silverhorn, naturalist supervisor of the Ohio Department of Natural Resources Division of Parks and Watercraft, says the park will help preserve the legacy of the Shawnee and also remember the people of European descent who settled in Greene County.

"Great Council represents the reuniting of the people and communities and histories that have been separated for many years," says Silverhorn, a citizen of the Eastern Shawnee who grew up on the Oklahoma reservation.

ODNR broke ground in May 2022 at the site of historic Oldtown, a village at the center of Shawnee culture in the late 18th century. Visitors may be surprised to find that the property covers just over 14 acres.

The park's three-story, 12,000-square-foot interpretive center, described as a modern take on the Shawnee council house, features a mix of human and natural history.

The main floor features a "living stream," a theater, and a gift shop, while the second floor is dedicated to the history of the Shawnee people from presettlement days, when they roamed widely over the eastern continent, to modern life in Oklahoma.

The lower level meets museum-grade curation standards, including strict environmental and security controls, to house specialized exhibits, displays, and artifacts. The inaugural exhibit features a series of photos from the three federally recognized Shawnee tribes, all now located in Oklahoma and all of whom were consulted in developing the center.

Although modest in size and heavy on history, the new state park incorporates plenty of nature, says Mary Mertz, ODNR's director.

Along with the living stream in the council house, the park includes a short walking trail through a native prairie restoration with a connection to the Little Miami River through land owned by the Little Miami Conservancy.

"We envision people watching the movie, checking out the aquatic species in the stream, learning about the history, and then walking down to the river," Mertz says. "We hope to see families, school groups, Scouts, and all people use this space to learn more about the tribes who used to call this part of Ohio home."

The Eastern Shawnee Tribe will be featured in the "Tribes Today" section with a montage of photos from various tribal events and facilities. We hope many tribal citizens get an opportunity to visit this amazing facility.

CULTURAL PRESERVATION SUBMITTED BY LORA NUCKOLLS. DIRECTOR

FYI: History of Indian Law

Tribes have numerous federal laws related to their civil rights, children, land access, and religion. They have a unique relationship with the United States: a trust relationship based on historical agreements and interactions with the federal government. Here are some of the specific laws tribes had to pass to have more quality in America.

- 1924 Indian Citizenship Act. Native people were the last population to be granted American citizenship.
- 1934 Indian Reorganization Act. Often called the "Indian New Deal," this legislation was created to give tribes more economic development, preserve culture, and promote tribal governments.
- 1946 Indian Claims Commission. Due to the egregious under-compensation tribes received for ceding their lands under hundreds of treaties with the United States, the United States allowed tribes to sue the nation to receive equitable payment.
- 1968 Indian Civil Rights Act. Until this law, many natives were denied freedom of assembly, press, and speech, especially on federal and tribal lands.
- 1978 Indian Child Welfare Act. Due to the large number of native children who were alienated from their families, either through social services or boarding schools, this law was created to keep native communities intact.
- 1978 Indian Religious Freedom Act. This law gives Native Americans the full right to practice their native religion, use their sacred objects, and access sacred sites. NAGPRA is closely related to this law.
- 1990 Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act. This law focuses on the return of Native American human remains and cultural items and the protection of Native American burial sites.

H.A.V.E.N. UPDATE

Support Group: Please call our office for details.

Program Update:

Hello all -

By the time you read this our two new staff members will have joined our team. Look for a proper introduction to them both next month.

In this month's article, we're focusing on Teen Violence/Dating Awareness Month (which was in February). In honor of Teen Dating Violence Awareness Month, our Outreach Manager (Tracie Delano) had the privilege of helping to facilitate "Man Up" a local program for Ottawa County and Craig County high school boys. "Man Up" is a grassroots organization developed to provide our youth with reliable information, offer connections to community resources, and show them that they are living in a community that cares about them and their future.

February was Teen Violence Dating Awareness Month Have you talked to the teens in your life (kids, grandkids, nieces, and nephews) about healthy relationships? Do they know what's healthy and what's not? Do they know the warning signs of an abusive relationship? Do you?

"Relationships may be defined in different ways depending on who's involved, but healthy relationships all depend on a few key elements: healthy communication, healthy boundaries, mutual respect, and support for one another. Check in with each other's needs regularly while also giving each other space and privacy and be sure to keep an eye out for the warning signs of dating abuse". (loveisrespect.org)

It's so important to make sure that we and our teens understand what the warning signs of dating abuse look. Here are a few of the signs – do you notice any of these things happening in your teen's relationship? Have you seen your teen check their boyfriend or girlfriend's social media accounts? Have you noticed your teen worrying that their partner's temper? Take time this month and talk with your teen.

Warning Signs:

- 1) Checking your phone, email, or social media accounts without your permission.
- 2) Putting you down frequently, especially in front of others.
- 3) Isolating you from friends or family (physically, financially, or emotionally).
- 4) Extreme jealousy or insecurity.
- 5) Explosive outbursts, temper, or mood swings.
- 6) Any form of physical harm.
- 7) Possessiveness or controlling behavior.
- 8) Pressuring you or forcing you to have sex.

Abusive relationships are all about power and control. While your teen may be unwilling or unable to leave their relationship right now, it's important that they know that abusive partners are unlikely to change their behavior. You and your teens first priority should always be personal safety.

Contact Haven to discuss your teen's situation and to identify possible signs of an unhealthy or abusive relationships.

CHILD CARE AND DEVELOPMENT FUND

SUBMITTED BY DIAN RANDALL. CCDF DIRECTOR

Our CCDF department along with the Northeastern Oklahoma CCDF and ICW Programs have been planning for our Week of the Young Child event that we do each April. It is a week of fun activities we do for the area youth to celebrate early learning, young children, their teachers, families, and communities.

All of the NEOK Tribal CCDF programs have also been meeting to plan for our Childcare Providers Appreciation Banquet that will be held in late May. This banquet is our opportunity to show appreciation to the childcare providers in our service area. Without the care they provide, many parents would not be able to work or attend school.

We have also been planning to have 3 showings of "Dinosaurs World Live" in March, free of charge for our area childcare providers and families, at the Coleman Theatre in Miami, Oklahoma.

Each month we have families that are due to recertify with our CCDF Program and we want to thank all of our families for getting their updated information to us in such a timely manner.

We are pleased to announce that the Eastern Shawnee Tribe's Child Care Development Fund (CCDF) Grant continues to support our families and tribal citizens who live within our service area with essential programs. As the Director of the CCDF Program, I want to share some important information about the programs we offer to eligible residents within a 100-mile radius of our office near Wyandotte, OK.

- 1. Car Seat Program: We understand the importance of child safety, which is why we provide our Car Seat Program. If you reside within our service area, you are eligible to receive support for child car seats to ensure the safety of your little ones during travel.
- 2. Newborn Starter Kit Program: Welcoming a new addition to your family is a joyous occasion. Our Newborn Starter Kit Program aims to provide essential items to help you care for your newborn. Eligible families within our service area can access this valuable support.

These programs are made possible through the CCDF grant, and they are in accordance with our grant guidelines. We are committed to assisting families in our community with these vital resources.

If you or someone you know needs child care assistance or has questions about our Child Care Development Fund (CCDF) Program, please don't hesitate to reach out to us. Our office is conveniently located at 10100 S. Bluejacket Rd., Suite #3, Wyandotte, OK 74370.

Keeping Kids Safe in Cars

Starting with a baby's very first ride home from the hospital, parents must make sure that their kids travel safely. Get the right car seat and learn how to use it correctly to help keep your child safe in the car.

It's also important to be aware of the dangers of parked vehicles (especially hot ones), and know how to protect kids even when a car is not moving.

How Can Kids Ride Safely in Cars?

Car seats. Using a child safety seat (car seat) is the best protection you can give your child when traveling by car. If you need help installing your safety seat or want to be sure you did so correctly, there are child seat inspection stations across the country. Find one near you at https://www.nhtsa.gov/vehicle-safety/car-seats-and-booster-seats#installation-help-inspection.

Booster seats. Booster seats are vehicle safety seats for kids who have outgrown forward-facing or convertible car seats but are still too small to use only a vehicle's seatbelts.

Air bag safety. Air bags were designed with adults and teens in mind. Young children can be injured or even killed if they ride in the front passenger seat and an air bag opens.

What Else Should I Know?

Besides keeping kids safe while a vehicle is in motion, it's important to know about the risks of parked vehicles. Never leave a child alone in a parked car. Cars heat up quickly and a hot car can be life-threatening. Also, kids can get trapped in a car, accidentally put a car into "drive," or get hurt moving seats or opening and closing windows. Remind other caregivers, grandparents, babysitters, and anyone else who drives your kids about the importance of child seats and the dangers of parked vehicles.

FEVER (HIGH TEMPERATURE) IN KIDS

SUBMITTED BY CCDF

All kids get a fever from time to time. Usually, a fever isn't dangerous or bad for kids. It can even be a good thing because it can help the immune system fight infection. Still, parents might be unsure about how to handle a fever at home and when to call the doctor. Here are some tips.

What Is a Fever (High Temperature)?

In general, a fever means the body's temperature is 100.4°F (38°C) or higher. Different ways of measuring a temperature — rectal, armpit, ear, forehead, mouth — get a slightly different number, so the number that means a child has a fever is a little different too.

What Causes Fever (High Temperature)?

Fevers in kids are usually caused by an infection. A fever helps the body by stimulating the immune system to fight the infection. Doctors also think the higher temperature makes it harder for the germs to grow.

A few other reasons kids can have a fever:

Overdressing: Infants, especially newborns, may get fevers if they're overdressed, wrapped in a blanket, or in a hot environment because they don't regulate their body temperature as well as older kids. But because fevers in newborns can be a sign of a serious infection, even infants who are overdressed must be checked by a doctor if they have a fever.

Immunizations: Babies and kids sometimes get a mild fever that lasts about a day after getting vaccinated.

A child who is teething might have a slight rise in body temperature, but it's probably not the cause if the temperature is higher than 100°F (37.8°C).

When Is a Fever (High Temperature) a Sign of Something Serious?

In most healthy kids who are acting well, a fever isn't serious.

But a fever can be serious for:

Infants younger than 3 months: If an infant younger than 3 months has a rectal temperature of 100.4°F (38°C) or higher, call your doctor or go to the emergency department right away.

Kids with some health conditions: If your child has an ongoing health issue, make sure you know if the doctor should be called for fever.

A fever is probably not serious if your child is 3 months or older and:

- · is still interested in playing
- is drinking well
- is alert and smiling
- has a normal skin color
- · looks well when their temperature comes down

Don't worry too much about a child with a fever who doesn't want to eat. This is common with infections that cause fever. For kids who still drink and urinate (pee) normally, not eating as much as usual is OK.

What Are the Signs of a Fever (High Temperature)?

Kids with a fever might:

- feel warm
- act differently (they might be fussy or cranky, or quieter than usual)
- breathe a little faster or have a faster heart rate than normal
- have a headache
- have chills or sweating
- · have red or flushed skin

For any of these signs, take your child's temperature to know if they really have a fever.

If your child feels warm or is acting unwell, use a digital thermometer to confirm a fever. Different ways of taking the temperature are more accurate than others at measuring the true body temperature.

The best way to take a temperature:

for kids 3 years old and younger: a rectal temperature for kids 4 or older who can cooperate: an oral temperature (by mouth) for any age: under the armpit (axillary) and temporal artery (forehead) are easiest but less accurate. Tympanic (in the ear) is OK for kids 6 months and older.

It's a fever when a child's temperature is at or above one of these levels:

- rectal (in the bottom), tympanic (in the ear), or temporal artery (across the forehead): 100.4°F (38°C)
- oral (in the mouth): 100°F (37.8°C)
- axillary (under the arm): 99°F (37.2°C)

Treating a Fever (High Temperature):

How Can I Help My Child Feel Better?

No treatment is needed if a child is still playing and drinking normally and doesn't have pain.

Treating a fever with medicine isn't needed if a child is still playing and drinking normally and doesn't have pain. Give medicine only when a fever causes a child discomfort or keeps them from drinking.

While kids have a fever, keep an eye on them, help them to rest, and keep offering fluids to drink. They need to drink a little extra to make up for the fluids they lose from sweating.

Fever (High Temperature): Home Care Measures Medicines

If your child is uncomfortable from a fever or not drinking fluids well, you can give one of these medicines: acetaminophen (such as Tylenol or a store brand) or ibuprofen (such as Advil, Motrin, or a store brand). Do not give to children under 6 months old.

Follow the package directions for how much to give and how often. If you don't know the recommended dose or your child is younger than 2 years old, call the doctor to find out what to use and how much to give.

If your child has any medical problems, check with the doctor to see which medicine to use.

Unless instructed to by a doctor, never give aspirin to a child. Such use is linked to Reye syndrome, a rare but serious illness.

Do not give any medicine for fever to infants younger than 3 months old unless instructed to by a doctor. Staving Comfortable

If your child has a fever:

Have them wear lightweight clothing and stay covered with a light sheet or blanket. Heavy clothes and blankets can keep the body from cooling, which can make your child uncomfortable.

Keep the room at a comfortable temperature — not too hot or too cold.

Make sure they get plenty of rest. Staying in bed all day isn't necessary, but a sick child should take it easy.

They should stay home from school or childcare until their temperature has been normal for 24 hours.

Lukewarm sponge baths to lower a fever generally are not recommended. In fact, sponge baths can make kids uncomfortable from shivering. Never use rubbing alcohol (it can cause poisoning when absorbed through the skin) or ice packs/cold baths (they can cause chills that can raise body temperature).

Food and Drinks

Offer plenty of fluids to avoid dehydration because fevers make kids lose fluids faster than usual. Oral rehydration solutions (like Pedialyle, Enfalyte, or store brands) are a good choice. You also can give water, soup, ice pops, and flavored gelatin. Avoid drinks with caffeine, including colas and tea, which can make dehydration worse by making kids pee more often.

Let kids eat what they want (in reasonable amounts), but don't force it if they don't feel like eating much.

When Should I Call the Doctor?

The temperature that should trigger a call to the doctor depends on a child's age, the illness, and whether they have other symptoms. You might ask if your doctor has specific guidelines on when to call about a fever.

In general, call the doctor if your child is:

- younger than 3 months old with a rectal temperature of 100.4°F (38°C) or higher
- 3 months or older with a temperature higher than 102.2°F (39°C)
- any age but has a health problem like cancer or sickle cell disease and has a fever

Also call if a child 3 months or older has a fever and:

- refuses fluids or seems too ill to drink enough
- has lasting diarrhea or repeated vomiting
- has any signs of dehydration (peeing less than usual, not having tears when crying, less alert and less active than usual)
- has a specific complaint (like a sore throat or earache)
- still has a fever after 2-3 days
- · has a rash
- · has pain while peeing

Get emergency care if your child shows any of these signs:

- crying that won't stop
- extreme irritability or fussiness
- sluggishness and trouble waking up
- a rash or purple spots that look like bruises on the skin (that were not there before your child got sick)
- blue lips, tongue, or nails
- in an infant, the soft spot on the head seems to be bulging out or sunken in
- stiff neck
- · severe headache
- limpness or refusal to move
- trouble breathing that doesn't get better when the nose is cleared
- · leaning forward and drooling
- seizure
- moderate to severe belly pain

What Else Should I Know?

All kids get fevers, and in most cases, they're back to normal within a few days. For older babies and kids, the way they act can be more important than the reading on your thermometer. Everyone gets a little cranky when they have a fever. This is normal and should be expected.

But if you're ever in doubt about what to do or what a fever might mean, or if your child is acting ill in a way that concerns you even with no fever, always call your doctor for advice.

WHY RESPECTING OUR ELDERS IS IMPORTANT

SUBMITTED BY KATHLEEN BLANCHARD TRIBAL REALTY/LAND USE COORDINATOR

Reasons to Respect Elders

- They are our parents and caregivers who have nurtured and supported us.
- Their contributions to society deserve recognition.
- Respecting them brings a sense of purpose and fulfillment in their golden years.
- Respecting elders preserves cultural traditions and wisdom.
- It inspires younger generations to embrace the lessons offered by their elders.

Respecting our elders is not only a moral obligation, but it also holds great cultural significance. The reasons to respect elders are numerous and compelling. Our elders are our parents and caregivers who have tirelessly nurtured and supported us throughout our lives. They have played a pivotal role in shaping our values and beliefs, and their wisdom and guidance continue to impact our journey.

As our elders age, it becomes essential to acknowledge their contributions to society and provide them with the respect they deserve. They have dedicated their lives to various endeavors, whether it be their careers, raising children, or advocating for social causes. Honoring their experiences and recognizing their accomplishments helps build a stronger bond between generations and fosters a more compassionate community.

Moreover, respecting our elders ensures that they feel a sense of purpose and fulfillment as they navigate the golden years of their lives. Aging can bring challenges, but by treating our elders with reverence and dignity, we can provide them with comfort and ease, enabling them to age gracefully.

The cultural significance of respecting elders extends far beyond individual families. It is deeply ingrained in societies worldwide, emphasizing the value of wisdom and experience that older generations possess. By upholding this cultural tradition, we contribute to the preservation of our heritage, ensuring that the knowledge passed down through generations remains cherished and celebrated.

Through mutual respect and appreciation, we create a society that values the wisdom and experiences of our elders. This recognition not only empowers them to live fulfilling lives but also inspires younger generations to embrace the lessons and insights offered by their elders. Together, we can foster a harmonious and inclusive society that benefits everyone.

PROGRESS ON 110 ROAD SUBMITTED BY GLENNA J. WALLACE

Despite some of the crummy weather we encountered to start the project off, our Dirtwork contractor has been moving a tremendous amount of dirt and we're moving right along.

- Our ODEQ Storm Water permit has been applied for and approved.
- We have installed our SWPPP measures.
- All our boundaries and center of road have been established with our survey crew.
- All of our rebar for the cast in place structures (the bride and box culvert ends) has been delivered to the site.
- A large majority of the precast box culverts have been delivered to the site.
- The site has been cleared and grubbed of any trees or vegetation in the right of way.
- We have started bringing in fill from the borrow pit and started putting lifts on the roadway so that we might be able to get large vehicles (pump trucks, concrete trucks, etc.) back to the large bridge so that we might start pouring concrete back there soon.
- We have started staging wall forms back at the large bridge area to get geared up for pouring walls when the time comes.
- The bridge deck forms have been engineered and the plan will be to start seeing those forms show up in Mid-March.
